Update on G31000 LinkedIn group (closed)

It appears the G31000's LinkedIn group on ISO 31000 was shut down by LinkedIn. So this group can probably expect to receive it's former members.

The group's moderator was reported for having at least one, if not two, fake profiles with false information and plagiarized publications. His account was deleted by LinkedIn, and it appears his group was cancelled with him.

I am posting this only because a lot of people are going to be asking.

Dear Christopher

This is pretty serious allegations'. Is it factual and why does LinkedIn not post an official notice in this regard. An even more serious concern is that no one seems to question what you are claiming.

LinkedIn, please we are professionals, I hope. Kindly post an official notification.

LinkedIn does not comment on account closures nor does it monitor these groups to answer your question, Beulah.

The details of the Alex Dali and G31000 scandals have been well documented elsewhere, and I didn't want to pollute this group with a reporting of it all. Check the ISO 9001:2015 Users Discussion forum here on LinkedIn.

Well thanks for the update. However, this is strange because some of us found the exchanges very useful... and at least the ISO31000 Conference in Paris was very very useful and practical... so if the group leader was sharing useful information with the group, I am not sure why shut him out together with the group members... but well thanks for letting us know the latest on this story.

I am sure another, more reputable group will launch an ISO 31000 conference, and perhaps at a lower entrance fee.
